Information detailing Pennsylvania judiciary's 2014-15 budget request – including video and graphics – is available on courts' website

HARRISBURG — Information highlighting the Pennsylvania judiciary's 2014-15 budget request presented today to the Senate Appropriations Committee is featured on the courts' website.

In addition to facts and figures, also included are stories from Pennsylvanians who, in their own words, talk about how the work of the judiciary positively impacts lives. Those featured include a Pennsylvania State Police trooper, a drug court graduate, the Venango County solicitor for Children and Youth Services, and Philadelphia's president judge.

The judiciary's budget request, which details the funds needed to operate the courts, can also be found on the website.

Another website document features remarks presented today by Supreme Court Justice Thomas G. Saylor before the Senate Appropriations Committee detailing the budget process, recent savings, successes and upcoming initiatives.

All documents and the video stories can be found on the media resources page of the courts' website at www.pacourts.us/news-and-statistics/media-resources.
