

How the courts operate

Types of cases: Civil vs. Criminal

Civil matters include every type of legal action except criminal actions - usually involving private disputes.

- Examples include:
 - personal injuries
 - contract and custody disputes
 - adoptions.

The Commonwealth brings criminal charges against an individual for a violation of criminal law.

- Defendants can be charged with felony (most severe penalties), misdemeanor and summary offenses (lesser penalties).

The role of a Jury

- In criminal cases, a jury decides whether a defendant is guilty or not guilty, whereas in civil cases, the jury decides whether a defendant is liable or not liable.
- Juries are primarily available in Common Pleas Courts. There are no juries in Supreme, Superior and Magisterial District Courts, and rarely in Commonwealth Court.
- Even when a jury is permitted, both sides in a case can agree to have the case tried before a judge instead.

Court resources

Modern times and technology, coupled with a steadfast commitment to protecting the Commonwealth's most vulnerable populations, have expanded accessibility to Pennsylvania's courts.

Visit pacourts.us to learn how PA Courts:

- Provide justice for Pennsylvania's elders
- Facilitate language access
- Recruit and certify court interpreters
- Protect children and families under court supervision
- Educate jurists.

Need Legal Help?

PA Legal Aid Network: palegalaid.net

PA Bar Association Lawyer Referral Service:
(800) 629-7375

Need to Pay?

Go to our website to pay any court-ordered fines and fees.

Download our app

Get mobile access to court information with PAeDocket.

The Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts (AOPC) is the administrative arm of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court and executes the Court's policy and management directives to all courts on a statewide level.

WWW.PACOURTS.US

WWW.PACOURTS.US

The Pennsylvania Constitution set up our state government in three separate branches: executive, legislative and JUDICIAL.

Think of Pennsylvania's judicial branch as a pyramid.

1. At the base are Magisterial District Courts and Philadelphia Municipal Court.

- These courts handle preliminary arraignments and hearings, set bail, issue arrest and search warrants and issue emergency protection from abuse orders.
- Examples of cases include: traffic tickets, landlord-tenant disputes and underage drinking.

2. The next level is the trial level, called the Court of Common Pleas.

- These courts hear criminal and civil cases, including those involving families and children, such as divorce, property division, alimony, child custody and support, paternity and protection orders.
- They also hear appeals from the lower-level courts.

Additionally at this level are problem-solving courts, which offer rehabilitation programs for defendants struggling with behavioral problems, like drug addiction and severe mental illness.

Pennsylvania has two intermediate appellate courts: Superior and Commonwealth. Both determine if errors were made in cases heard at the trial court level.

3. The Superior Court is the appeals court for most citizens and businesses.

- It is one of the busiest intermediate appellate courts in the country.
- This Court's decisions have a significant impact on Pennsylvania's economy and the quality of life of our citizens.

4. The Commonwealth Court hears civil cases involving state or local government.

- It is the only court like it in the country.
- It not only hears appeals, but sometimes sits as a trial court in certain cases brought by or against the Commonwealth, such as a constitutional challenge to a state law or a tax dispute.

5. At the top of the pyramid is the Supreme Court, the highest court in the Commonwealth and the oldest appellate court in the nation.

- Seven justices serve on the Court and their job is to make the final judgment in interpreting Pennsylvania's laws and Constitution.
- The Court has administrative authority over all aspects of Pennsylvania's judicial system.

