

2014 PA Super 261

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA

Appellee

v.

CASEEN FENNELL

Appellant

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA

No. 2610 EDA 2013

Appeal from the Judgment of Sentence August 12, 2013
In the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County
Criminal Division at No(s): CP-51-CR-0013779-2012

BEFORE: LAZARUS, J., MUNDY, J., and PLATT, J.*

OPINION BY MUNDY, J.:

FILED NOVEMBER 21, 2014

Appellant, Caseen Fennell, appeals from August 12, 2013 aggregate judgment of sentence of three to six years' imprisonment after he was convicted of one count each of possession with intent to deliver (PWID) and intentional possession of a controlled substance.¹ After careful review, we vacate and remand for resentencing.

We summarize the relevant factual and procedural history of this case as follows. On November 29, 2012, the Commonwealth filed an information, charging Appellant with the above-mentioned offenses. On May 1, 2013, Appellant proceeded to a bench trial, at the conclusion of which, the trial court found Appellant guilty of the same. On August 12, 2013, the trial court sentenced Appellant to three to six years' imprisonment for PWID, and no further penalty for the possession charge, as the counts merged for the purposes of sentencing. Relevant to this appeal, Appellant received a three-year mandatory minimum sentence on the basis of the weight of the heroin, pursuant to 18 Pa.C.S.A. § 7508(a)(7)(i). On August 23, 2013, Appellant filed an untimely post-sentence motion, but the trial court did not take any action. On September 11, 2013, Appellant filed a timely notice of appeal.²

* Retired Senior Judge assigned to the Superior Court.

¹ 35 P.S. §§ 780-113(a)(30) and 780-113(a)(16), respectively.

On appeal, Appellant raises the following issue for our review.

Did not the [trial] court err in applying certain provisions of the mandatory minimum sentencing statute at 18 Pa.C.S. § 7508 to [Appellant]'s case, and thereby sentencing [Appellant] to a term of incarceration of 3 to 6 years, in that portions of [Section] 7508 are facially unconstitutional pursuant to Alleyn v. United States, 133 S. Ct. 2151 (2013), and are non-severable from the remaining portions of the statute?

Appellant's Brief at 3.

At the outset, we note that issues pertaining to Alleyn go directly to the legality of the sentence. Commonwealth v. Lawrence, 99 A.3d 116, 123 (Pa. Super. 2014). With this in mind, we begin by noting our well-settled standard of review. "A challenge to the legality of a sentence ... may be entertained as long as the reviewing court has jurisdiction."

² Appellant and the trial court have complied with Pa.R.A.P. 1925.

Commonwealth v. Borovichka, 18 A.3d 1242, 1254 n.8 (Pa. Super. 2011) (citation omitted). It is also well-established that “[i]f no statutory authorization exists for a particular sentence, that sentence is illegal and subject to correction.” Commonwealth v. Rivera, 95 A.3d 913, 915 (Pa. Super. 2014) (citation omitted). “An illegal sentence must be vacated.” Id. “Issues relating to the legality of a sentence are questions of law[.] ... Our standard of review over such questions is de novo and our scope of review is plenary.” Commonwealth v. Akbar, 91 A.3d 227, 238 (Pa. Super. 2014) (citations omitted).

In this case, Appellant was sentenced under a mandatory minimum statute at Section 7508, which provides in relevant part as follows.

§ 7508. Drug trafficking sentencing and penalties

(a) General rule.--Notwithstanding any other provisions of this or any other act to the contrary, the following provisions shall apply:

...

(7) A person who is convicted of violating section 13(a)(14), (30) or (37) of The Controlled Substance, Drug, Device and Cosmetic Act where the controlled substance or a mixture containing it is heroin shall, upon conviction, be sentenced as set forth in this paragraph:

(i) when the aggregate weight of the compound or mixture containing the heroin involved is at least 1.0 gram but less than 5.0 grams the sentence shall be a mandatory minimum term of two years in prison and a fine of $5,000 or such larger amount as is sufficient to exhaust the assets utilized in and the proceeds from the illegal activity; however, if at the time of sentencing the defendant has been convicted of another drug trafficking offense: a mandatory minimum term of three years in prison and $10,000 or such larger amount as is sufficient to exhaust the assets utilized in and the proceeds from the illegal activity

...

(b) Proof of sentencing.--Provisions of this section shall not be an element of the crime. Notice of the applicability of this section to the defendant shall not be required prior to conviction, but reasonable notice of the Commonwealth's intention to proceed under this section shall be provided after conviction and before sentencing. The applicability of this section shall be determined at sentencing. The court shall consider evidence presented at trial, shall afford the Commonwealth and the defendant an opportunity to present necessary additional evidence and shall determine, by a preponderance of the evidence, if this section is applicable.

18 Pa.C.S.A. § 7508.

This Court recently explained Alleynes' impact on the imposition of mandatory minimum sentences as follows.

In Alleynes, the Supreme Court held that "facts that increase mandatory minimum sentences must be submitted to the jury" and must be found beyond a reasonable doubt. Alleynes, supra at 2163. Alleynes is an extension of the Supreme Court's line of cases beginning with Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000). In Alleynes, the Court overruled Harris v. United States, 536 U.S. 545 (2002), in which the Court had reached the opposite conclusion, explaining that there is no constitutional distinction between judicial fact finding which raises the minimum sentence and that which raises the maximum sentence.

It is impossible to dissociate the floor of a sentencing range from the penalty affixed to the crime. Indeed, criminal statutes have long specified both the floor and ceiling of sentence ranges, which is evidence that both define the legally prescribed penalty. This historical practice allowed those who violated the law to know, ex ante, the contours of the penalty that the legislature affixed to the crime—and comports with the obvious truth that the floor of a mandatory range is as relevant to wrongdoers as the ceiling. A fact that increases a sentencing floor, thus, forms an essential ingredient of the offense.

Moreover, it is impossible to dispute that facts increasing the legally prescribed floor aggravate the punishment. Elevating the low-end of a sentencing range heightens the loss of liberty associated with the crime: the defendant's expected punishment has increased as a result of the narrowed range and the prosecution is empowered, by invoking the mandatory minimum, to require the judge to impose a higher punishment than he might wish. Why else would Congress link an increased mandatory minimum to a particular aggravating fact other than to heighten the consequences for that behavior? This reality demonstrates that the core crime and the fact triggering the mandatory minimum sentence together constitute a new, aggravated crime, each element of which must be submitted to the jury.

Alleyne, supra at 2160-2161 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

Commonwealth v. Miller, --- A.3d ---, 2014 WL 4783558, *4-5 (Pa. Super. 2014). Although Appellant was convicted at a bench trial, under the Due Process Clause, he was still entitled to have the extra element of the aggravated offense found by the factfinder beyond a reasonable doubt pursuant to Alleyne and In re Winship, 397 U.S. 358 (1970). Alleyne, supra at 2156.

This Court has recently noted that Section 7508(a)(2)(ii) cannot be constitutionally applied in light of Alleyne, resulting in an illegal sentence. See Commonwealth v. Thompson, 93 A.3d 478, 493 (Pa. Super. 2014) (resolving an as-applied challenge to Section 7508(a)(2)(ii) in Thompson's favor in light of Alleyne and remanding for resentencing). However, in this case, Appellant argues that Section 7508 is facially unconstitutional in its entirety and its subsections cannot be severed from one another. Appellant's Brief at 13-22. The Commonwealth counters that because Appellant stipulated to the drug weight for the purposes of trial, any error regarding Alleyne was rendered harmless. Commonwealth's Brief at 10-12. Both parties cite to this Court's recent decision in Commonwealth v. Newman, 99 A.3d 86 (Pa. Super. 2014) (en banc).

In Newman, this Court confronted the same type of challenge to the mandatory minimum found at Section 9712.1, regarding the distance between drugs and guns. Id. at 91. Section 9712.1 has the same format as Section 7508 in that one subsection contains the added element of the aggravated offense, and another subsection states that the elements shall be found by the trial court by a preponderance of the evidence. See id., quoting 42 Pa.C.S.A. §§ 9712.1(a), 9712.1(c); 18 Pa.C.S.A. §§ 7508(a)(7)(i), 7508(b).

The Newman Court first concluded that the defendant's sentence was illegal in light of Alleyn and required this Court to vacate and remand for resentencing. Id. at 98. However, this Court noted that Alleyn issues are subject to harmless error analysis, but nevertheless concluded that the Alleyn issue in Newman was not harmless. Id. at 98-100.

We cannot find that the error here was harmless, because the evidence as to the element of "in close proximity" was not necessarily overwhelming. As previously noted, the drug contraband was found in a bathroom. The firearm was found under a mattress in a bedroom across the hallway, and the actual distance between the contraband and the firearm was six to eight feet. Recently, our supreme court discussed at length the meaning of "in close proximity" as it is used in Section 9712.1. See Commonwealth v. Hanson, 82 A.3d 1023 (Pa. 2013), generally. The Hanson court noted that the concept of "in close proximity" is inherently imprecise and observed the differing conclusions as to its meaning both among the courts of this Commonwealth and among the courts of other jurisdictions. Hanson, 82 A.3d at 1037-1038, and otherwise, generally. If learned jurists cannot decide with precision what constitutes "in close proximity," we cannot say with finality that a panel of lay jurors would undoubtedly conclude from the evidence here that the firearm was "in close proximity" to the drug contraband.

Id. at 99-100. Finally, this Court rejected the Commonwealth's argument that if the error was not harmless, the appropriate remedy would be to remand to the trial court to empanel a second sentencing jury. Specifically, in rejecting this argument, the Newman Court concluded that Section 9712.1 in its entirety must be struck down as unconstitutional in light of Alleynes, concluding that its subsections were not severable.³

The Commonwealth's suggestion that we remand for a sentencing jury would require this court to manufacture whole cloth a replacement enforcement mechanism for Section 9712.1; in other words, the Commonwealth is asking us to legislate. We recognize that in the prosecution of capital cases in Pennsylvania, there is a similar, bifurcated process where the jury first determines guilt in the trial proceeding (the guilt phase) and then weighs aggravating and mitigating factors in the sentencing proceeding (the penalty phase). However, this mechanism was created by the General Assembly and is enshrined in our statutes at 42 Pa.C.S.A. § 9711. We find that it is manifestly the province of the General Assembly to determine what new procedures must be created in order to impose mandatory minimum sentences in Pennsylvania following Alleynes. We cannot do so.

³ The author in this case concurred in the result in Newman, disagreeing with the majority that the subsections of Section 9712.1 could not be severed, concluding that no special "mechanism" was required to allow a jury to find the element of the aggravated offense beyond a reasonable doubt. Id. at 105 (Mundy, J., concurring). The author continues to believe Newman was wrongly decided on that point; however, it is binding on this Court and must be applied in a principled manner in all future cases unless reversed by our Supreme Court.

Id. at 102.⁴

In the case sub judice, during trial, Appellant stipulated to certain laboratory reports. N.T., 5/1/13, at 59-60. Relevant to this appeal, one laboratory report was for 55 clear packets of a substance, the packets were labeled "Magnet," and the substance was an "off-white powder." N.T., 5/1/13, Commonwealth's Exhibit C-4, at 1. The report noted that one packet was analyzed as containing heroin and weighed 37 milligrams. Id. The report also noted that the "packaging and material ... [were] consistent in appearance." Id. Therefore, the Commonwealth argues, and the trial court concluded, that the remaining 54 packets contained at least 37 milligrams as well, which in the aggregate, would bring the total weight to 2.035 grams. Commonwealth's Brief at 5 n.2; Trial Court Opinion, 1/16/14, at 5-6. Based on this, the Commonwealth argues that any Alleyne error was harmless. Commonwealth's Brief at 8.

However, we are mindful of this Court's recent decision in Commonwealth v. Valentine, --- A.3d ---, 2014 WL 4942256 (Pa. Super. 2014). In Valentine, the Commonwealth sought to have a mandatory minimum sentence imposed against the defendant. The trial court allowed the Commonwealth to amend the information to include the necessary additional elements required by Alleynes to be found by the jury beyond a reasonable doubt. Id. at *1. The two questions were submitted to the jury, and it found the additional elements beyond a reasonable doubt. Id. As a result, the trial court imposed the appropriate mandatory minimum sentences pursuant to the appropriate statutes. Id.

⁴ We note the Commonwealth has filed a petition for allowance of appeal with our Supreme Court in Newman, docketed at 646 MAL 2014. As of the date of this decision, it is still pending.

Although the trial court seemingly followed Alleynes's requirements, the Valentine Court held that the trial court was not permitted to allow the jury to resolve the mandatory minimum questions absent legislative action in accordance with Newman.

Here, the trial court permitted the jury, on the verdict slip, to determine beyond a reasonable doubt whether Appellant possessed a firearm that placed the victim in fear of immediate serious bodily injury in the course of committing a theft for purposes of the mandatory minimum sentencing provisions of 42 Pa.C.S.A. § 9712(a), and whether the crime occurred in whole or in part at or near public transportation, for purposes of the mandatory minimum sentencing provisions of 42 Pa.C.S.A. § 9713(a). The jury responded "yes" to both questions. In presenting those questions to the jury, however, we conclude, in accordance with Newman, that the trial court performed an impermissible legislative function by creating a new procedure in an effort to impose the mandatory minimum sentences in compliance with Alleynes.

The trial court erroneously presupposed that only Subsections (c) of both 9712 and 9713 (which permit a trial judge to enhance the sentence based on a preponderance of the evidence standard) were unconstitutional under Alleynes, and that Subsections (a) of 9712 and 9713 survived constitutional muster. By asking the jury to determine whether the factual prerequisites set forth in § 9712(a) and § 9713(a) had been met, the trial court effectively determined that the unconstitutional provisions of § 9712(c) and § 9713(c) were severable. Our decision in Newman however holds that the unconstitutional provisions of § 9712(c) and § 9713(c) are not severable but “essentially and inseparably connected” and that the statutes are therefore unconstitutional as a whole. Id. at 13–14. (“If Subsection (a) is the predicate arm ... then Subsection (c) is the enforcement arm. Without Subsection (c), there is no mechanism in place to determine whether the predicate of Subsection (a) has been met.”).

Moreover, Newman makes clear that “it is manifestly the province of the General Assembly to determine what new procedures must be created in order to impose mandatory minimum sentences in Pennsylvania following Alleynes.” Newman at 14. Therefore, the trial court lacked the authority to allow the jury to determine the factual predicates of §§ 9712 and 9713. See Newman at 14–15 (recognizing that several trial courts of this Commonwealth have found Section 9712.1 as a whole to be no longer workable without legislative guidance).

Id. at *8. As a result, this Court vacated Valentine’s judgment of sentence and remanded for resentencing, without the applicable mandatory minimum sentences.⁵ Id. at *9.

⁵ As noted above, Newman did acknowledge that Alleynes errors, like those under Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), are subject to harmless error analysis. See generally Newman, supra at 98-100. However, if Newman’s overriding conclusion is, as Valentine suggests, that mandatory minimum statutes in Pennsylvania must be stricken in their entirety as facially unconstitutional, any discussion of harmless error is rendered moot. This is because, once the Court concludes that the subsections cannot be severed and must all be struck down, there is no
(Footnote Continued Next Page)

In the instant case, as noted above, Appellant stipulated to laboratory reports that, at a minimum, suggest that the total weight of the heroin was 2.035 grams. N.T., 5/1/13, at 60-62, Commonwealth's Exhibit C-4. As a result, the trial court concluded that the Commonwealth did prove this element to the trial court beyond a reasonable doubt, as required by Alleynes and Winship. Trial Court Opinion, 1/16/14, at 5-6. However, the trial court's opinion reveals that this conclusion was solely premised on its belief that Section 7508(b), which permits the trial court to find the necessary elements by a preponderance of the evidence, was severable from the rest of the statute. Id. at 3-5. Pursuant to this Court's decision in Newman, this conclusion was not correct.

Furthermore, we see no meaningful difference, for the purposes of Newman and Valentine between submitting the element to the jury and accepting a stipulation from a defendant. They both have the purpose of finding a method to impose a mandatory minimum sentence outside the statutory framework, but consistent with Alleynes. However, both Newman and Valentine unequivocally state that creating a new procedure in an effort to impose a mandatory minimum sentence is solely within the province of the legislature. See Newman, supra; Valentine, supra.

(Footnote Continued) _____

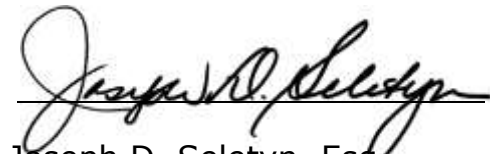

statutorily authorized sentence upon which a harmless error analysis may be applied. See, e.g., Rivera, supra (stating, "[i]f no statutory authorization exists for a particular sentence, that sentence is illegal and subject to correction[.]") (citation omitted).

While submission to a jury is a more formal and involved procedure, we decline to fracture Newman and Valentine further by concluding that when read together, they only prohibit formal mandatory minimum procedures, but permit informal ones. Based on these considerations, we conclude that the trial court erred in imposing the mandatory minimum sentence in this case. As a result, Appellant is entitled to relief.

Based on the foregoing, we are constrained to conclude the trial court erred in imposing the mandatory minimum sentence in light of this Court's recent decisions in Newman and Valentine. Accordingly, the trial court's August 12, 2013 judgment of sentence is vacated, and the case is remanded for resentencing, without the mandatory minimum, consistent with this opinion.

Judgment of sentence vacated. Case remanded for resentencing.
Jurisdiction relinquished.

Judgment Entered.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Joseph D. Seletyn", written over a horizontal line.

Joseph D. Seletyn, Esq.
Prothonotary

Date: 11/21/2014