Magisterial district realignment proposed

Public comment on change accepted for 30 days

LEWISTOWN - The Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts has proposed a realignment that will impact two of Mifflin County's three magisterial district courts in an effort to balance case load between the three courts.

The reestablishment plan for Mifflin County's three magisterial district courts has been posted and can be viewed online for a period of 30 days on the Mifflin County website www.co.mifflin.pa.us by following the links to the Court Office or Magisterial District Judges. The proposal also will be posted within each magisterial district court and within the Mifflin County Commissioners' Office.

Boundary changes are proposed for Magisterial District 58-3-01 (Judge Jack Miller) and Magisterial District 58-3-03 (Judge Kent Smith). No boundary changes are anticipated for Magisterial District Judge Jonathan Reed.

Public comment will be accepted on the realignment until close of business Wednesday, Nov. 24.

Under Pennsylvania's court system, no magisterial district should have a total workload which is 15% higher or lower than the workload of any other district within the judicial district. These changes are proposed in order to equitably divide the workload in Mifflin County. All portions of each magisterial district remain contiguous. Access to justice to those boroughs and townships

Magisterial district realignment proposed

The Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts has proposed a realignment that will impact two of Mifflin County's three magisterial district courts in an effort to balance case load between the three courts.

The reestablishment plan for Mifflin County's three magisterial district courts has been posted and can be viewed online for a period of 30 days on the Mifflin County website www.co.mifflin.pa.us by following the links to the Court Office or Magisterial District Judges. Under Pennsylvania's court system, no magisterial district should have a total workload which is 15% higher or lower than the workload of any other district within the judicial district. These changes are proposed in order to equitably divide the workload in Mifflin County. All portions of each magisterial district remain contiguous. Access to justice to those boroughs and townships moved is no more than a few minutes or a few miles difference.

Under the proposal, three boroughs and three townships will be moved from Judge Miller's district to Judge Smith's district.
