- 2006-07: Deployed to Afghanistan as a Civil Affairs JAG
- 2016: Retired as a “Mustang” Captain

“I felt that it was my duty to go back and assist in our war on terrorism. My military service is who I am. The military instilled in me the confidence to do anything, to accomplish what is conceived as impossible. My military background has assisted me greatly every day on the bench and in life; the leadership taught in the Airborne Infantry is guiding me as a judge. I have been able to continue to assist my fellow service-members in Philadelphia Veterans Court. I am blessed to be in the position I am today - and the road I traveled is who I am. Airborne!”

“The Army has enriched my life. The first big thing the Army teaches you is about doing things for more than just yourself. You think of others. There’s no place for ego. Leadership comes from that. You have the back of your fellow soldiers and they have yours. As a judge, you continue to work as a team with the staff, the parties, attorneys and witnesses to achieve justice. It is a wonderful thing if it works right and just like the Army, justice is not about me being the judge, it is about being a member of a team. A judge is like a high-ranking officer and that judge has to guide people through a challenge. It is about ensuring a fair process and a fair result.”

"My military career shaped me into the adult I am, and is very useful on the bench. Nothing is impossible with the right attitude and mindset. I had an awesome career with unique assignments afforded to me. Despite my countless career highlights, two rise to the top: I served as UNCMAC's Joint Duty Officer in Korea's DMZ, fostering critical communications with North Korea; and finishing my USAF flying career as a U-2 Mission Pilot, flying mission-critical recon missions above 70,000 feet."
